The Native Princes of India, 1911-12.

At the Coronation Durbar of His Majesty, the King-Emperor, at Delhi, most of the Native Princes of India will be assembled to celebrate this glorious event and a hand book or guide giving a short account of them with photographs will be a memorable publication. There is no work published in which we can find an account with photographs of all the Native Princes and Chiefs. An album like the one indicated here will be a valuable book of reference.

The Native Princes and Chiefs will be classified according to the provinces to which they belong. The order of precedence will be observed.

There are in all about 700 Native States in India and the album will therefore have to be divided into four or five volumes.

It is proposed to issue two editions one De Lux and another Popular at a cheaper rate.

The first volume will contain a short account of the British Empire with the latest photographs of Their Majesties the King-Emperor and Queen Mary, the late King-Emperor Edward VII and Queen Victoria, the Good.

Besides these, there will be given portraits of His Excellency the Viceroy and of all the present Governors and Lieutenant-Governors of the Presidencies.

The work, artistically got up and very costly, will be a fitting memento of this unique occasion. It is earnestly hoped that Government will be graciously pleased to promote this object by assisting chiefly for securing the correct figures of revenue, etc., of each State and the latest photographs of the Princes and Chiefs. It is apprehended the photographs will not be furnished unless the Princes and Chiefs are told by the Political Agents about the utility and importance of the work. It is only through the favour of the Government that thorough completeness in the work may be secured.

The humble desire of those undertaking this work is that the Government will be graciously pleased to accord its patronage.
